A MURDER MARS THE DAY.

James Lee is Shot Down in Cold Blood by a Negro. Mob Spirit Prevails. Sheriff's Coolness Saves Prisoner.

Harrisonburg's Fourth of July celebration had a tragic ending Monday, when James Marshall Lee, 60 years old, manager of Garber & Will's feed stores, was shot and almost instantly killed by Pink Barber, 25 years old, a negro from Harrisonburg, Augusta county, who was spending the holiday in town. Following the shooting intense excitement prevailed. Hundreds of persons flocked to the jail openly avowing their intention of lynching the prisoner. Sheriff Carickhoff held the mob in bay and later as the crowd increased and violence seemed imminent, Judge Hass twice addressed the surging mob urging them to calm themselves and let the law take its course. In the meanwhile Sheriff Carickhoff was quietly swearing in deputies and special officers and had the jail turned into a veritable arsenal, he was fully prepared to repel an attack on the jail. No attack, however, was made. As a further precaution the saloons of the town were ordered to be closed for the rest of the day.

Shortly after the shooting, which occurred a few minutes after 3 o'clock, Coroner Biedler, assisted by Dr. Fiebrugh, summoned a jury to investigate the cause of the tragedy. The inquest was held in Garber & Will's office, a few feet from the scene of the shooting. According to the testimony of the several witnesses examined, the negro Barber had been around the stable apparently trying to steal a whip and had actually taken the whip, when Mr. Lee interfered and ordered the negro to leave the stables. It was at this juncture that Barber whipped out a .38-caliber pistol and fired four times at Lee. The fourth ball entered Lee's side, passing through the heart, stomach and liver and caused almost instant death. The injured man threw his hand to his side, saying that he was shot and asking a bystander to catch the negro. Lee was dead in a few minutes.

After firing the shots, Barber took flight, running directly across the street, where he was caught by Chas. A. Johnson, a young man from Staunton, who held him fast until two officers took him in charge and hurried him to jail, where he was placed behind the bars; none too soon.

While the excitement was at the highest pitch, Sheriff Carickhoff appeared with guns in his hands and spoke a few words to the crowd. The Sheriff urged them to let the law take its course, assuring them that a grand jury would be speedily summoned and that justice would be meted out to the negro. The sheriff made it very plain that he was going to do his share towards upholding the majesty of the law.

Later Judge T. N. Haas appeared upon the scene, and taking his stand upon the porch, sought to calm the anger and fury of the noisy throng with words of admonition. The Judge personally assured them that he would take every legitimate step to see that justice was not delayed.

The tumult calmed down for a time and then revived with redoubled vigor and then the mob was recruited by additions from the holiday visitors. W. D. Garber, one of the proprietors of the stable said: The negro came to the office door and said that he wanted to go back to one of the stalls. I told him he could not go back there with a lighted cigarette. Garber then laid the cigarette down on the steps and started back; but instead of going to a stall he went to a buggy and took a whip. I saw the whip by his side. Then Lee remarked that the negro had come in there to steal and then Lee told the negro he would have to get out. I then told the negro that if he did not get out I would call a policeman.

Mr. Garber said: Lee picked up a board and remarked that he would make the negro get out. He saw Lee following the negro and next heard the shot Mr. Garber was standing in his office and went to the door and just on the outside the negro fired again, the ball this time almost grazing Mr. Garber's leg.

I noticed that after the fourth shot Mr. Lee had dropped the board and had his hand on his side. He said that he was shot and told me to run and catch the negro. I helped Mr. Lee into the office door and left him on the floor when he urged me to go after the negro. I found that the men across the street had caught the negro. When I got back Mr. Lee was too weak to talk and he died in a few minutes.

The negro's bullet entered Lee's left side, passing through the heart, stomach and probably the liver and lodging near the skin in the right side towards the backbone. Practically no blood came from the wound.

Pink Barber, the man who fired the shot that killed Lee, is a son of Daniel Barber, and lives near Barristown, Augusta county. There is a conflict in the statements as to the negro's condition. While it is generally admitted that he had been drinking during the day, those who witnessed the shooting do not think that he was drunk. They say with certainty that he was sober enough to know what he was doing.

James Marshall Lee was born near Burkettown, Augusta county, Dec. 8, 1850. He spent his life upon a farm, until the time he moved to Harrisonburg, in May, 1902. He became proprietor of Colliello, but later went into the hardware business, in which he remained until about a year ago. Since that time he was employed as manager for Garber & Will's live-y stable.

Mr. Lee was a man of good qualities, genial and kind at all times. He had many friends.

THE SAME STORY FROM FOUR DIRECTIONS.

Many People Getting on the Right Track.

From the Fort Wayne Journal Gazette: "Four people came to Fort Wayne, yesterday, from different directions, met at the same point, and told practically the same story regarding the great medicine, Root Juice. The gentleman from Van Wert, the last six months, and the people of my town, think there never was a medicine like it. Frank Boroff, the druggist, who has the agency, said it is a pleasure to sell Root Juice, as we never have to listen to complaints, on the contrary, many who buy one bottle, soon return for more, and persuade their friends to try it. It is certainly a great tonic, and has done wonders for many who have suffered years with chronic stomach and kidney troubles." The man from Columbus City said: "It don't make much difference where you go, you are sure to hear some one talking about Root Juice. Hundreds of people of my town have tried the remedy, and I haven't heard a single complaint. It certainly must be a great medicine, or so many people wouldn't be praising it so highly." An old lady from Bluffton said: "If you want to hear talk about Root Juice, go to Bluffton. I tell you our people are crazy about it. I heard Mr. Gettelius, our local druggist say he never saw anything like it in his whole life. He said he had sold nearly 2,000 bottles of Root Juice within the past four months, and the people still coming for it, in crowds, and none were complaining, but nearly every one praised it, and told of some remarkable good it was doing. The gentleman from Kendallville said: "Don't tell me anything about Root Juice. If you want to hear about the wonderful cures this medicine is making, go to my town, and call on O. P. Raber. He has sold the remedy to hundreds of people, and has heard them praising it, for several months."

Such talk is very common these days at this point, as many local people who have tried the remedy, are praising it, to their friends and neighbors, and seem to have unlimited confidence in its merits. Much can be learned regarding the remedy, at Walton & Smoot's.

A Trip to the West.

DEAR EDITOR—I had thought while I was in the west of writing you something about our trip, but was too busy traveling and visiting. Since I have been home I have been too busy at work, but it seems that some one dreamed that I told him there was no place like old Virginia. When he woke up he thought it real and had it published. He must have had the same kind of a dream years ago and thought he was married and still thinks it was real. I judge that is why he is still an old bachelor. Now about the west or rather what I saw, of it. There is some very fine land out there, nice, level and very productive. They have many advantages. The roads are laid out much better and are kept like the Valley pike. You can drive faster there with a road wagon than you can here with a buggy. I have always been an advocate of good roads and if I was an officer and had any thing to do with the roads, since I have seen the roads they have in the west, I would make a greater effort to have better roads. And if I failed I would retire from office. They have the trolley lines, over most of the country and through most of the towns. That is a great convenience. I traveled on the trolley lines a great deal to see the country and passed through a good many of the cities in Indiana. We came from Warsaw by way of Peru, Kokomo, Tiffin, Elwood then to Anderson, also Middletown and Muncie. I took a trip to Indianapolis and saw the capital and the great soldiers and sailors' monument. I saw the airship fly. It was a great success,
